Business Wire Expert panel discussion: Startups and Publicity - Challenges and Opportunities

Today, almost everyone has used or at least heard about Google, Facebook, Amazon, WhatsApp, Ebay, Uber, Zalando, trivago, Delticom, Xing, and many others. These are just a few examples of innovative and fast growing entrepreneurial ventures, known as startups. Startups are increasingly being an object of both scientific analysis and economic policies across the world. Arguably, this has to do with the significant contribution that startups make to the innovative capability, competitiveness and economic development of national economies. However, not all startups manage to successfully set a foot into the market and get their business into the spotlight. In our panel, we will be discussing the challenges and opportunities that startups face when it comes to publicity. Publicity plays a key role in the survival and success of startups as it is through the business of getting noticed that contributes to the competitive advantage of startups. Publicity also helps to attract investors, talented employees and even to find new business partners.
